news flash

CNN

RIO DE JANEIRO We didn't need Pope Francis' trip to Brazil last week to grasp that the new pontiff, who's set a tone of simplicity and love for ordinary people, is a hit. Polls around the world show approval ratings that would be the envy of any politician or celebrity, while vast crowds show up in Rome for even his most routine activities.

What Brazil confirmed, perhaps, is that his act plays as well on the road as at home. During his week in Brazil for World Youth Day, an international Catholic event, mob scenes erupted everywhere Francis went, despite cold temperatures and driving rain for much of the week.

On Monday, frenzied admirers almost hijacked his motorcade. On Wednesday a group of nuns shrieked and rushed the pope like teenage girls at a Justin Bieber concert, and on Thursday he drew more than a million young people to a worship service on Rio's Copacabana Beach. A Saturday prayer service drew 3 million people, according to organizers.

As the trip wrapped up Sunday, here are four things we learned about Pope Francis from his week in Brazil.

ROAD TRIP

FOUR THINGS WE LEARNED FROM THE POPE'S VISIT TO BRAZIL

He has a sedate charisma

Francis was elected at 76, so he doesn't exude the magnetism of the early John Paul II. Francis allows his smile, his genuine delight in meeting people and his homespun wisdom to do the work. During a visit to a Rio slum, he said the poor are often the most generous folk, quoting a Latin American proverb: "You can always add more water to the beans."

He's changed the story

If proof were needed of how much Francis has changed the story about the Catholic Church, consider that he'd been in the global spotlight for five days by the time Friday night rolled around, and no one had even raised the subject of the Church's child sexual abuse scandals until he did so himself.

He's a savvy politician

Heading into the trip, there was fear that Brazil's massive street protests in June might reignite. Aside from a few scattered incidents, that didn't happen, and Francis seemed to artfully navigate through the political shoals. The "Pope of the Poor" repeatedly called for greater attention to the needy and on several occasions applauded the thirst for justice among young people.

He's an Energizer Bunny

Despite his advanced age, Francis has a seemingly boundless reserve of energy. Even before he left Rome, he had trimmed the two days of rest originally planned for Benedict XVI to one, adding a 150-mile outing to Aparecida to visit a famed Marian shrine, and later in the day stopped by a Rio hospital that treats alcohol and drug addicts.

YouTube is only part of the story

Hector Luis Alamo Jr.

 » redeye@tribune.com
 » @hectorluisalamo

In 50 years, when my generation is old and gray, we won't have stories to tell the young folks. We'll have videos.

I visit my grandma regularly in Humboldt Park. We sit at the kitchen table, and I spend a couple of hours listening to her stories over black coffee and sweet bread. She tells me about being a little girl in the Honduran countryside, teaching in the capital city, coming to Chicago, my mom's first American Christmas. All the while, I'm thinking, "Man, I wish they had cellphone video and YouTube back then."

Yet I realize that, had YouTube been around back then, I wouldn't be sitting at my grandma's house every week, listening to her stories and drinking coffee. Had there been video, she'd just say, "You tube it" or "It's on my Facebook."

We've all witnessed the preoccupation with capturing everything on video—at a concert, a sporting event or a party. There's always an iPhone or Android floating in the air somewhere, flash on, red light blinking.

Most of us don't even put half of what we record on Facebook or YouTube. The video either stays on our phones or, if we think it's extra special, gets stored in some computer file with a random date on it that looks like a serial number. These videos are shuffled away like normal memories, just waiting to be pulled out at a kitchen table with coffee and bread. But they're not our real memories.

Videos are supposed to remind us of a memory and, for the people who weren't there, to show what it was like. But a video can't capture what the concert was like, people all around you, the music rattling your rib cage. A video doesn't come close to capturing the view from the top of that hill you climbed, because videos are terrible at capturing scale. Wide fields and tall mountains look miniature compared to what they were like in real life. Videos never convey how hot it was that day on the Vegas Strip, what the ocean smelled like or what it smelled like inside the bakery. The lions at the zoo always look smaller on screen, and the cars at the racetrack never move as fast.

Videos don't tell stories. There's no beginning or end. It's just a snippet of what happened. The people who weren't there don't know what happened before or after.

If we spend too much time trying to capture all of life's moments on film, we might be unable to recall the details of our own lives. And in the end, we're mostly our memories. Think about it: If your entire memory were erased tomorrow, would you still be you?

Let's hold up the cellphones a little less and open our eyes, ears and nose a little more. Because 50 years from now, someone will think the memories in our heads are more valuable than the memories on our computers.

JILTED BRIDES AND GROOMS TURN NUPTIAL LEFTOVERS INTO CASH

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

Charlene Zomaya bought her white wedding dress, shoes, jewelry and plane tickets for her destination wedding in Lebanon. Her fiance was tasked with booking the venue and ordering the flower arrangements.

Then came a phone call that lasted only 30 seconds but changed everything.

"It was maybe two weeks before the wedding that he called and said he didn't want to get married anymore. He didn't explain anything and just said, 'I don't want to.' And none of that stuff was refundable," said Zomaya, 26, a social worker who lives in Ravenswood. They never spoke again.

Canceling a wedding can leave a would-be bride or groom heartbroken—and just flat-out broke.

With the average cost of a wedding in the U.S. pegged at $28,427—and more in Chicago at nearly $50,000—jilted parties are looking to recoup the costs for those dream weddings that weren't. And while there is such a thing as wedding insurance, it covers events such as extreme weather conditions but not changes of heart.

When her fiance broke off the engagement in November 2010, Zomaya fled to New York for a week to avoid further embarrassment. When she returned, she didn't want to venture outside her home for fear of running into friends or family and having to explain that she didn't make it to the altar.

"While I was sitting in my room and looking at all this stuff, I was trying to think of the best way to get rid of it all," she said. "Everything was right in front of me every time I looked in the closet, and it's a lot of stuff and it's big stuff. My apartment's not big enough to hide everything and get away from it."

While I was sitting in my room and looking at all this stuff, I was trying to think of the best way to get rid of it all."

—Charlene Zomaya, founder of myweddinggotcancelled.com

She started looking online for advice on how to deal with what happened as well as ideas for where she could sell her unused wedding items. (She had spent $4,000 on her wedding.) While there were plenty of options on sites such as Craigslist and eBay, Zomaya was looking for something more—a place to unload her stuff and her feelings.

So in 2011 she created myweddinggotcancelled.com, a small site that is part social network, part online marketplace.

Another site, bridalbrokerage.com, popped up in May 2012 to provide an option for would-be couples to get back some money that they put down on the venue and other vendors such as photographers.

The site estimates that more than 250,000 weddings are called off every year, based on research that approximately 2.5 million weddings occur per year and roughly 10 percent to 15 percent get canceled.

"If you cancel a wedding, normally you're out that money," said Heather Gates, the chief operating officer for the site. "There's a chance you can get some of their money back."

People with canceled weddings register as sellers on the site, providing information about their wedding purchases such as the amounts they've put down for deposits, the balances remaining and the dates of their events. The brokerage firm acts as a liaison between the couples no longer getting married and the ones who are willing to pick up the balances on already scheduled venues. Buyers get a discount and pay a fee that goes to the selling couple and the site.

There are more than 10,000 registered buyers looking for weddings mainly in California and New York, Gates said. Since April, there have been more than 100 sellers who have canceled weddings all over the country, she said.

While it is upsetting to cancel a wedding and part with what were supposed to be sentimental items, buying and selling those things may not be as taboo as one would think.

The benefit to selling items online is that consumers get a discount and the sellers quickly can get rid of the reminder that the "happily ever after" didn't happen, said Jamie Miles, editor of theknot.com, which has a "wedding woes" message board to talk about such topics.

"At the end of the day, you returning a couple things or selling things is better than you making the wrong choice and regretting it down the line," she said.

RULES OF ENGAGEMENT

When the wedding is called off, what happens to that shiny ring?

- 1 If the engagement ring is a gift from the groom and the bride calls it off, the bride should give back the ring. If the groom calls off the wedding, the bride could choose to give the ring back, keep it or sell it.
- 2 If the ring is a family heirloom, the ring should be returned to the family.
- 3 If the couple purchased the ring together, they should decide what they want to do with it. L.V.

Extreme makeover: Lake Shore edition

Chicago Tribune

A long-planned transformation of North Lake Shore Drive is entering a new phase, as city and state planners look to cull ideas from the public on how best to serve the tens of thousands who use the crucial roadway every day.

Overhauling the seven-mile stretch likely will cost hundreds of millions of dollars, and work probably won't start for at least five years, but such input is expected to help shape the project that aims to balance the thoroughfare's origins in the early 1900s as "a boulevard through a park" and one that will meet the changing needs of those who drive, ride, walk and run along it for years to come.

Public meetings are set to start next week, but civic groups already are weighing in with proposals to lower the speed limit, accommodate quicker transit trips via bus-only lanes, incorporate design standards that are compatible with city boulevards rather than highways and, among the top priorities, improve lakefront access.

Transportation authorities as well say they

HOW TO BE HEARD

Three public meetings will be held about how to improve travel on North Lake Shore Drive and enhance access to the lakefront. Each meeting will be from 6-8 p.m.:

- » Aug. 6 at Gill Park, third-floor meeting room, 825 W. Sheridan Road
- » Aug. 7 in the atrium of Truman College, 1145 W. Wilson Ave.
- » Aug. 8 in the South Gallery of the Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum, 2340 N. Cannon Drive are studying bold concepts such as expanding the shoreline near the downtown beaches to help ease overcrowding on the lakefront trail and alleviate flooding on the roadway from high waves during stormy weather.

For years the drive has been treated as an expressway by many drivers, despite a speed limit of 45 mph in some sections and tightly spaced entrance and exit ramps where weaving maneuvers contribute to an average of three crashes a day north of the downtown area, according to accident data.

EXPRESS LINES

- » A South Lawndale man was denied bail Sunday after he was accused of shooting a man six times as the victim tried to put his toddler in a car seat.
- » Police are asking for the public's help in finding a 9-year-old boy who has been missing since he attended summer school classes Friday in Gresham.
- » A group of protesters targeted the Shedd Aquarium on Saturday as part of a campaign in about a dozen countries to ask that whales and dolphins in captivity be released. TRIBUNE

Conductor released, still faces charges

SANTIAGO DE COMPOSTELA, Spain The driver of a Spanish train that derailed, killing 79 people, was released from police custody Sunday night but still faces unspecified criminal charges after testifying for two hours before a judge, media reports said.

Francisco Garzon, 52, had been under arrest since a day after Wednesday's accident, on suspicion of reckless homicide.

The media reports cited police and court sources but did not say what criminal charges the judge brought against Garzon. The conditions of release were that he check in regularly with the court and surrender his passport, the reports said.

The experienced driver was traveling at more than twice the 80 kilometers per hour permitted on a curve going into the city of Santiago de Compostela when the train careened off the track and smashed into a wall.

The death toll from Spain's worst train disaster in decades rose to 79 after one injured person—local media reported she was a woman from the U.S.—died Sunday.

Seventy people remain hospitalized with injuries from the crash, which crumpled the train and set some train cars on fire. Of those, 22 were in critical condition.

After the accident, Garzon spoke with both the train system control center and emergency dispatchers, his face covered in blood from a head wound. Spanish newspapers have reported that transcripts of those communications show that he recognized he was going too fast.

Interior Minister Jorge Fernandez Diaz said Saturday there was sufficient evidence to charge Garzon with reckless homicide.

Seven dead in Florida standoff

Miami police on Sunday searched for a motive for a shooting rampage in which six people were killed by a gunman who set his apartment on fire before shooting several neighbors and taking others hostage. More than 100 police stormed an apartment in Hialeah in a raid Saturday, killing the gunman and rescuing two hostages.

At least 24 dead in Italy bus crash

At least 24 people were killed Sunday in a bus crash in Italy's Avellino province, the Italian news agency ANSA reported. Roughly 40 passengers were on the bus when it was traveling east of Naples, according to ANSA. Public broadcaster RAI reported the bus went off an overpass.

Peace talks set to resume

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu won Cabinet backing to release 104 Palestinian prisoners, setting the stage for a peacemaking bid starting Monday in Washington. Netanyahu overcame emotional opposition within his Cabinet, heightened by lobbying from families of some Israelis killed by prisoners due to be freed.

THE HAT TRICK

WHAT'S BUZZIN' IN THE BLACKHAWKS WORLD

When a jersey just won't do ...

Wondering what happened to Andrew Shaw's face stitches from the Stanley Cup Final? "I actually donated the stitches out of my face to a charity. But it's nice, it goes to a good cause. It's not like I'm going to frame them myself or anything." First of all, good for you, Andrew. Second of all, ewwwww!

How'd you catch that?

Sometimes it's tough to tell what Bryan Bickell loves more: hockey or fishing. When he gets his day with the Stanley Cup, however, he won't have to choose. "I'm going to bring it on a fishing show, 'Facts of Fishing' up in Ontario with Dave Mercer, so I'm looking forward to that and just having a good day with it."

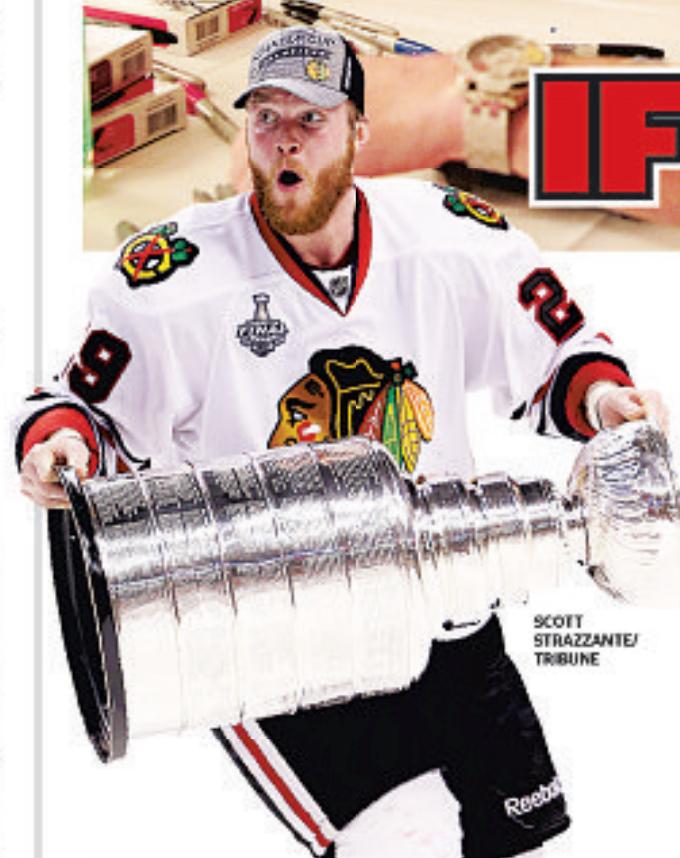

BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE FILE

Bleep yeah!

Corey Crawford's calmed down a little since his legendary F-bomb speech at the Hawks' victory rally. "It was a one-time deal, a lot of emotions for that moment," he said this weekend. "We were having fun all week, and I maybe got a little carried away."

By Scott King | FOR REDEYE

If anyone knows how intense and bizarre the memorabilia craze can be, it's Blackhawks players—especially after winning two Stanley Cups in four seasons. Although they may be used to being asked to sign their sweaters and equipment by now, sometimes they are caught off guard by eerie requests. RedEye caught up with several players (and one team legend) at the Blackhawks Convention, which took place this weekend at the Hilton Chicago, and asked about the weirdest thing they've autographed.

SCOTT KING IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

“A couple odd body parts here and there, that's kind of funny.”

—Brandon Bollig, forward

“I guess it's for a good cause, but it's usually for breast cancer that the bras always catch me off guard a little bit, till you realize what it's for. But other than that I can't really think of anything too out there.”

—Jonathan Toews, center

“Undergarments I guess. Strange stuff like that, or parts of the anatomy. Those were weird. Of course I didn't do it.” [Smiles.]

—Tony Esposito, Blackhawks Hall of Famer

“I've signed a few things ... but I don't know if I'm allowed to speak on camera here. [Smiles.] But that was probably after the last Stanley Cup. There's some crazy fans out there, but it was fun, you know. It was good times.”

Coach Quenneville and his mustache have our panel in fine spirits. As for D-Rose, well, he's got work to do.

1	How should Joel Quenneville celebrate his contract extension?	Four words: Mustache. Rides. For. All.	Take his mustache and his mustache's Twitter out to dinner.	By taking the stache to a nice bed and breakfast.	A new tin of mustache wax?	By never paying for another drink in this town again. Cheers, Q!
2	Now that the Blackhawks Convention is over...	... you gross SOBs can take those jerseys off. You're sweating on me on the train.	... the Bears will tell us their O-line is good, though they did little to improve it. Get your sound bites ready, Trestman!	... we can finally say goodbye to the playoff mullet.	... we have to wait a whole year before seeing Andrew Shaw "twerk" again.	... can we lose the hockey weather till October?
3	What was the first thing Alfonso Soriano did when he got to New York?	Hold on: Can we talk about race relations for a sec?	Made sure he didn't have a locker next to A-Rod.	Left a bag of flaming poop in front of Yankees GM Brian Cashman's office door with a note that read "I'm baaaack."	Arranged seats for groupies 1, 2 and 3 in different sections of Yankee Stadium.	A hop, a skip and an O-for-8. Sounds about right.
4	Derrick Rose is the fourth most popular player in the NBA. How can he move up?	When did the "black people like watermelon" thing start? Was there a meeting?	PLAY IN A DAMN GAME!	Playing NBA basketball would be a start.	I'm gonna go out on a limb here and say PLAY BASKETBALL.	By not letting Tom Turney speak on your behalf.
5	Who said this: "It has been affecting my fishing"?	Also: Who DOESN'T like watermelon? Those people should be arrested.	A-Rod. Talking about his quad strain or his sex life (not sure which).	Bryan Bickell, who is getting married. He was also heard saying "no honey, those jeans don't make you look fat."	Anthony Weiner, on being caught with his lure out again.	It was actually texted from Carlos Danger to Ryan Braun.

American captain still has Chicago's back

By Matt Lindner | FOR REDEYE

Former Fire midfielder DaMarcus Beasley emerged from the locker room in the bowels of Soldier Field and into the postgame media scrum proudly carrying the spoils of his efforts in Sunday's Gold Cup finale: a giant, gleaming gold trophy.

"I'm enjoying the celebration," he said with a smile.

The celebration will be etched into the 31-year-old's mind forever, of standing as the captain of a championship squad after the U.S. men's national team dispatched Panama 1-0 on the field where his professional career began.

"To win it here again is a special moment for myself, and to be captain and hold the trophy up for the first time, it was a good moment," he said. "It was something I'll never forget."

While you can take the athlete out of the Windy City, you apparently can't take the Windy City out of the athlete. "I still have so much love for the fans of the Chicago Fire," he said. "This was my first real club."

Beasley, who played 4½ seasons at Soldier Field as a member of the Fire and won the Gold Cup in Chicago six years ago while on the U.S. squad, certainly earned his moment.

Over the past month, the American team he's captained has been red hot, winning 11 consecutive games. That streak, which started June 2 against Germany, has the Fort Wayne, Ind., native feeling optimistic about the squad's World Cup chances in 2014.

"You want to start peaking at this time before a World Cup, before all the qualifying," you want that confidence," he said. "Right now, we have that confidence that we can beat anybody, and it's a lovely thing to have. Hopefully it stays until Brazil."

Although this squad did feature marquee names such as himself and forward Landon Donovan, Beasley said this title felt more like a true team effort.

"You look at today, obviously over the last month and you can't say that one player had a bad performance," he said. "Every person on this team in this Gold Cup had a good game when they got their chance."

MATT LINDNER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Hugh Jackman
in 'The Wolverine'

MCT

He debuted in the 1970s, and while Wolverine hasn't always smoked his trademark cigar, and while his costume has changed a time or two over the years, he'll always be, as the catchphrase goes, the best there is at what he does. Which is slicing up bad guys, though it also could mean minting money as one of Marvel Comics' most valuable franchises. Among the highlights:

FILMS

Hugh Jackman has played him in three "X-Men" movies (2000-2006), the solo "X-Men Origins: Wolverine" (2009), an uncredited cameo in "X-Men: First Class" (2011) and "The Wolverine." He reprises the role in next year's "X-Men: Days of Future Past."

Wolverine also appeared as action figures and on trading cards, T-shirts, caps, mugs, belt buckles, ear-rings, key chains, backpacks, boxers and dog collars.

VIDEO GAMES

'The Uncanny X-Men'
(1989)

A Nintendo adventure from publisher LJN, it marked the first of more than 25 home video games to star or co-star Wolverine.

COMICS:

'The Incredible Hulk' #180-181

(October-November 1974)

Created by Bellerose artist John Romita Sr., writer-editor Roy Thomas and writer Len Wein, the scrappy superhero first appeared as a Canadian-government operative pitted against the Hulk.

'Giant-Size X-Men' #1

(July 1975)

Wolverine returns as part of a revamped X-Men lineup that eventually will become one of Marvel's biggest hits.

'Wolverine' #1-4

(September-December 1982)

His first solo title, this Japan-set miniseries introduced major characters and scenarios of the 2013 movie. The character has gone on to star in dozens of series, miniseries and one-shots.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
You could receive some surprising news. An ex-boyfriend from high school will look you up on Facebook, declaring his undying love. Thank a sexy sun.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Mercury is helping you to get a clear view of things. If you were with someone who was bad news, you'll be happy to be out of the situation. If you're in a relationship that is just OK, you could be planning your escape.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Since the sun is creating some romantic confusion, try not to make any big decisions. You probably want to make a final choice about someone, but you're lacking the information you need to do this.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
You'll receive some flirty attention from someone when you least expect it, courtesy of Mercury. Maybe an online friend will express interest in getting to know you.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
With the moon opposite your sign, you can't figure out how to handle a complicated relationship. Part of you wants to run, but part of you wants to stay. Talk things over with a close friend, a minister or a therapist.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
With four planets making things difficult, you feel like you're being tested by some angry gods. Don't worry. This challenging time will end by next week. In the meantime, don't get married and don't break up with anybody.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
A bouncy moon is cheering you up, and you're ready to get into trouble. You'll chat with five people at a party, showing off your flirtatious powers and collecting phone numbers to use on a rainy or lonely day.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Rowdy Mars is creating an urge to get into trouble. Even if you're in a relationship, you want things to get more interesting and more fun right away. But don't ditch a longtime love just because you're getting bored. Find a way to introduce more kink into the equation.

Aries March 21-April 19
You're re-evaluating a relationship, with the sun increasing your street smarts. Was it really such a good idea to marry a stripper?

Taurus April 20-May 20
A confident moon is increasing your sexual mojo. Wherever you go, you'll attract admirers. All of a sudden, girls are reacting to those new biceps you've been developing at the gym.

Gemini May 21-June 21
You and a sexy friend are experiencing some tension, thanks to the sun. One minute, you can't stand each other's politics. The next, you can't wait to get into bed.

Cancer June 22-July 22
This is a great time to make a major change. A pile-up of planets in your sign is creating a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to get things going in a better direction. Ditch the losers, the whiners and the people who don't support you.

KATY PERRY VS. LADY GAGA

While Justin Bieber sits atop the Twitter throne with 42 million misguided followers, the race for second is heating up. Katy Perry recently passed Lady Gaga to take over the second spot and become the social media service's most-followed woman, billboard.com reports.

So which of these hyper-successful women should you follow?

Let's find out. REDEYE

She boasts 39.9 million followers, and she follows 122 accounts.

THE STATS

She has 39.2 million followers and follows 135,247 accounts.

WINNER: @ladygaga. Hey, at least there's a chance she'll follow you back!

LAST PHOTO TWEETED

This is a promo image for Gaga's next album, "Artpop." The caption lets you know the first single, "Applause," drops Aug. 19.

WINNER: @katyperry. Say what you want about Brit, at least Katy is sharing some of her personality.

With comments on everything from her personal projects to the death of Cory Monteith, Katy is good for a few tweets a week.

UPDATE FREQUENCY

Mama Monster did not tweet in April or May, and she went dark for a month in late June and early July.

That would be @johnmayer. We're not so sure that's an improvement over ex-husband @rustyrockets.

TWITTER CRUSH

You might have seen him around town. @taylorkinney111 stars on "Chicago Fire," which shoots in town.

WINNER: @ladygaga. With tweets like, "#blackhawks, go get that Cup boys!! Go Chicago!" how can we not love @taylorkinney111?

OVERALL WINNER

How can we choose? Let's all just agree that both of these women are more deserving of the No. 1 spot than Justin Bieber.

NOT THE VOCAL CORDS!

Frank Ocean was forced to cancel his Australian tour when he was diagnosed with a torn vocal cord, billboard.com reports. Ocean reportedly was having trouble singing during Thursday's opener in Melbourne, and the tear was discovered during a subsequent visit to the doctor. No word on how long he'll need to rest that beautiful singing voice.

Oh, we've got dirt. Get the scoop on your favorite musicians, actors and reality TVers all day long at redeyechicago.com.

THE DIGIT

$55 million

That's how much "The Wolverine" earned at the domestic box office over the weekend to debut at No. 1, Reuters reports. "The Conjuring" fell to No. 2 at $22.1 million.

Turn to Page 19 for more on the many faces of Wolverine.

Going dark

Ron Weasley is all grown up! Rupert Grint, the actor who spent his childhood playing the young wizard, will play a drug-addicted gangster in a London revival of the play "Mojo," latimes.com reports. Hermione would not be pleased. Previews begin in October.

Them's the breaks

If you see Jennifer Aniston walking with a limp, blame it on Justin Theroux. "I have a broken toe," Aniston told eonline.com. "Not to out my sweet, sweet fiance, but he has big feet and wears these boots. He stepped on my toe. Broke it. I felt it."

JULY 30

HOT DATE That's the premiere date for "Capture" on The CW. Rob Anderson, a 25-year-old Lakeview resident, is one of the competitors in the "Hunger Games"-like reality competition show.
